Tatannuaq (c. 1790s - early 1834)

was an Inuk interpreter for two of John Franklin's Arctic expeditions in Canada.

Originally from a group of Inuit living 320 km (200 mi) north of Churchill, he was employed as an interpreter at the Hudson's Bay Company trading post in Churchill, becoming proficient in English and Cree. Tatannuaq was an interpreter for Franklin's Coppermine expedition; Franklin would sometimes send him ahead of the party to scout the terrain, and he helped to communicate with groups they encountered. He accompanied

Franklin on the Mackenzie River expedition, serving in a diplomatic role and dissuading

Inuit groups from attacking the expedition. After working as an interpreter at Fort

Chimo, he left to assist in locating John Ross's expedition and died due to bad weather a short distance from Fort Resolution in early 1834. The butterfly species Callophrys

augustinus and a Northwest Territories lake were named after him. (Full article...)

The Vegas Golden Knights of the National Hockey League have completed nine seasons as of the 2025–26 season. Noted for their early success as a franchise, the Golden Knights have qualified for the Stanley Cup playoffs eight times in their nine completed seasons, with five Pacific Division championships, three Stanley Cup Final appearances, and a Stanley Cup championship in 2023. During their inaugural season in 2017–18, the franchise broke the NHL records for most wins and points in an inaugural season and became the first franchise since the 1967–68 St. Louis Blues to reach the Finals in their inaugural season; however, they ultimately lost the 2018 Stanley Cup Final to the Washington Capitals in five games. The Golden Knights later returned to the Finals in 2023, defeating the Florida Panthers in five games to win their first Stanley Cup. They returned again in 2026, losing to the Carolina Hurricanes in six games. (Full list...)
